EXTERNAL TALKS & A WALK

THE HISTORY OF DRAGON HALL

The story of 1000 years occupation of the riverside site in King Street, beginning with Saxon dwellings, use of the site by Woburn Abbey and a hall house in 1330. Robert Toppes's unique medieval trading-hall complex then takes centre stage with a history covering five hundred years when its original use was concealed and it became a crowded tenement until its re-discovery and restoration from the 1970s onwards.

ROBERT TOPPES THE MERCER

The story of the wealthy 15th century Norwich merchant who owned Dragon Hall. Of unknown origin he rose rapidly through the city elite to become Mayor and M.P. and one of the richest citizens, typical of the new breed of merchants whose enterprise made Norwich the second city of England. There are tales of civic unrest, property and bank deals and marriage into gentry .

ALL ABOUT KING STREET

A guided walk through centuries of change along one of the city's most important routes. Today it is possible to see impressive Dragon Hall next to monuments to Norwich's recent industrial past. Hear stories of its almost forgotten residents, see traces of a lost port and take in the ever-changing landscape along easy terrain. Duration: 1 hour.

Guided Walk

THE RESIDENTS OF DRAGON HALL

After Robert Toppes died, the Hall provided residential accommodation for 500 years and was lost as a trading-hall until its re-discovery in the 1970s. Based on Census records for 1841 to 1911, this is the story of the families who lived here, including two pubs, a vicarage and a butcher's shop. It presents a picture of a vibrant and varied working class community, typical of 19th century Norwich.
